

NYPD's Special Victims Squad

Photographs by Antonio Bolfo

In the wake of Dominique Strauss-Kahn's arrest in New York City for sexual assault of a hotel housekeeper, Antonio Bolfo spent two days with New York City Police Department's Special Victims Squad (SVS). He documented the two lead investigators for the Dominique Strauss-Kahn case as they worked the case and also the Interview Room that Strauss-Kahn spent the night immediately after his arrest.

Antonio gained very special access to this elite group of New York City's Police Department through an assignment with Newsweek Magazine. The work was published in the June 6, 2011 issue of Newsweek and is currently off embargo now.

Detective Lane and Detective Sandimir (L to R), the two lead investigators in the Strauss-Kahn case, watch an evidence video May 25, 2011, in New York, NY.

LEFT TO RIGHT
The cell in the Special Victims Squad room
May 24, 2011, in New York, NY.

Detective Gutierrez and Lieutenant Lamboy
(L to R) discusses a case May 25, 2011, in
New York, NY.

LEFT TO RIGHT
Detective Santos, holding an evidence folder, discusses a case over the phone, May 24,
2011, in New York, NY.

The interview room where Strauss-Kahn spent the night after his arrest, May 25, 2011, in New York.

ABOVE
The Special Victims Squad jacket in New York.

LEFT
The line up room where detectives place a suspect with other random people to show to the victim, MAY 24, 2011, in New York.

Contacts

Reportage by Getty Images New York

75 Varick Street
5th Floor
New York, NY 10013
USA

Annick Shen
annick.shen@gettyimages.com
+ 01 (646) 613.4248

Christina Cahill
christina.cahill@gettyimages.com
+01 (646) 613.4187

The full set of 29 images is available via your local Getty Images office.